Three brothers build India's first scripture-verified Vedic astrology AI

Every prediction traced to a real classical verse. 619 hand-researched rules, real computed birth charts, and AI that only writes the words. Live now, free, on Google Play.

NEW DELHI, India - 26 June 2026 - Most astrology apps in India are either accurate but built like a spreadsheet, or beautiful but quietly Western, generating generic horoscopes with no real birth data behind them. Three brothers, Ankur, Achal and Ankit Pal, spent eighteen months building something different.

ShukrAI is a Vedic astrology app where every prediction traces back to a real chapter and verse in the classical scriptures, and the birth chart is computed with astronomical precision rather than generated by AI guesswork.

"We did not want to write horoscopes. We wanted to read the actual scriptures and compute the actual chart," said Ankur Pal, founder of ShukrAI. "Every prediction in ShukrAI has a real verse behind it. That is the whole product."

619 rules, every one with a verse behind it. ShukrAI's reading engine is built on 619 hand-researched rules, each one traced to a verified citation in classical texts including the Brihat Parashara Hora Shastra, Phaladeepika, Jaimini Sutras, Brihat Samhita and Saravali. There is no training-data guesswork. Every rule carries a real source chain.

The math is computed, not invented. Birth charts (the D1 Rashi and D9 Navamsa), the Vimshottari Dasha timeline, Sade Sati periods, and panchang timings such as Rahu Kaal and Shubh Muhurat are all deterministic calculations, verified against established references like AstroSage and ProKerala. Google's Gemini model, via Vertex AI, then turns those exact numbers into warm, readable language in four languages: English, Hindi, Hinglish and Tamil. As the team puts it: "We compute your chart. The AI only writes the words."

The team also went back to the original Sanskrit and documented 35 places where colonial-era English translations had injected caste pejoratives, sexism and body-shaming that the texts never contained, and filtered every one of them out. "Filtering those out was not an extra feature," said Ankit Pal, who led the scriptural review. "It was the whole reason to build this."

A user can open ShukrAI and get their real Vedic birth chart and a daily reading for free, in their own language, computed from their actual date, time and place of birth across 6,957 Indian cities and international locations with daylight-saving-aware timezones. The app also follows clear editorial lines: it never names a year of death, and any mental-health content is paired with verified helpline numbers.

ShukrAI is available now on Google Play as "ShukrAI: Vedic Astrology AI." The core experience, including the birth chart and daily readings, is free. Deeper readings such as the Parashara life reading, Soulmate Sketch, Past Life and a 30-day forecast are available through an in-app currency, with a Divya Pass membership offering member pricing.

About ShukrAI

ShukrAI is a Vedic astrology and AI app built by three brothers, Ankur, Achal and Ankit Pal, in New Delhi, India. It pairs astronomically precise chart computation with 619 scripture-verified interpretation rules to deliver real, citation-backed astrology in four languages.
